

I'm writing to protest Sinclair Broadcasting's outrageous, partisan decision to show an anti-Kerry pseudo-documentary (i.e. political propaganda) days before the election.

Under this administration, it seems corporations think they can use their power with no public responsibility! I believe Sinclair is using "public" property--the airways--and this license imposes an obligation on them to serve the public interest. No doubt they think any enforcement of this requirement will come only AFTER the election, and at that point no doubt if "their candidate" wins there will be no penalty. This is a disgusting corruption of the political process, and another sign of how cynical corporations have become about their civic obligations.

I hope you will prove me wrong and immediately DO SOMETHING to prevent Sinclair from carrying out an act which subverts democracy and surely violates public trust. But sadly, I expect nothing from an FCC which seems, along with the rest of government these days, to slavishly serve corporate masters.
Sincerely,
